Pope's Attacker Called Cold, Lucid Terrorist

By R.W. Apple Jr.
New York Times Service

ROME - Alfredo Lazzarini, the head of the anti-terrorist squad at Rome police headquarters, was quite sure Thursday morning what sort of man he was dealing with in Mchmet Ali Agea, the young Turk accused of trying to kill Pope John Paul II on Wednesday.

"He is a terrorist with a capital "T — cold, lucid and certainly well-trained to shoot," said Mr. Lazzarini after the 23-year-old man had undergone more than 12 hours of iminterrupted question-

But several things were much less clear to the Italian authorities: Who trained Mr. Agea, who helped him escape from prison in Turkey, who paid for his wanderings through Europe, and who pro-vided him with the forged documents that concealed his identity? Nor was it clear whether Mr. Agea was a man of the left or the right.

Acted Alone -

The police have arrested no one else. They are convinced, according to government sources, that Mr. Agea acted alone - in the that he had no accomplices with him in St. Peter's Square and none, in all probability, elsewhere in Rome or in Italy. He himself insisted that the attack was his own idea and his own responsibility.

A rough draft of a leaflet found in the Turk's pocket was signed by any organization but by Mr. Agea, and it began, "I. Agea, have killed the pope so that the world may know of the thousands of victims of imperialism" - language that seemed to support his argument that he was not a part of an international plot. Yet Mr. Agca told investigators that he had no financial problems. More than $400 worth of Swiss

ANKARA - Following is the full text of the letter Mehmet Ali Agca wrote to the Turkish ocwspaper Milliyer several days before Pope John Paul II visited Turkey in November, 1979, and shortly after Mr. Agea had escaped from an Istanbul prison where he was being tried for the murder of the newspaper's editor in chief, Abdi Ipekei:

"The Western imperialists, who are afraid of Turkey establishing with her brothers the Islamic countries a new political, military and economic power in the Middle East, are sending over the commander of the masked crusaders, Pope John Paul, to Turkey.

"If this untimely visit is not canceled I will shoot the pope. The only reason for my escape from prison is this. "Also the Mecca raid which was planned and supported by the United

Since there was no evidence that he had committed robberies or burglaries to obtain money, documents and plane and train ockets, investigators believe that he must have the support of a formal or ioformal group somewhere outside Italy, probably in Turkey.

It was the first time the Israelis had confirmed a plane downed over Lebanon since the Syrian missile crisis began two weeks ago.

Israel has maintained unquestioned air superiority in Lebanese airspace since Syria sent troops there five years ago. It has shot down 13 Syrian MiG fighters in the last 18 months without losing one piloted aircraft. The downing of the Israeli drone occurred as Philip C. Habib, a U.S. special envoy, conferred in Damascus with Syrian officials in an effort to defuse the crisis that began to escalate April 28, when Israeli aircraft shot down two Syrian helicopters that had been used in attacks on Christian militias in the Sannin mountains overlooking the Christian city of Zahle.

Mr. Habib returned to Jerusalem on Thursday afternoon to contioue discussions with Mr. Begio and other Israeli officials.

Respooding to radio reports broadcast in Beirut and Damascus that a parachute had been spotted descending from the downed aircraft, an Israeli command spokesman said the drone was equipped with an automatic parachute de-vice used in recovery by belicopter. When struck by the missile, the spokesman said, the drone may have jettisoned the parachute.

Thursday's downing again raised questions of whether an Israeli air strike against the Syrian missile batteries would result in Israeli losses. Israeli electrooics countermeasures used in deflecting Egyptian and Syrian SAM-2 missiles during the 1973 war are coosidered to be no longer adequate against the improved versions of

L'Express Row May Signal Further Changes Following Left's Victory

By Joseph Fitchett ional Herald Tribune

PARIS - A dispute over coverage of the French presidential elec-tion has led to the departure of the top editors at L'Express - a move that French commentators view as the first of many changes in the news media likely to follow the So-cialist victory of Francois Mitter-

Olivier Todd, the L'Express editor, was asked to resign by the publication's owner, Sir James Goldsmith, because of an electionweek cover that Sir James reportedly judged to be damaging to President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and favorable to Mr. Mitterrand. The magazine's editor in chief, Jean-Francois Revel, resigned in solidarity with Mr. Todd.

Their departure is judged, in the words of a Paris newspaper, to be a "purge" to eliminate leftist sym-pathizers and make the newsmaga-tion puts it comfortably ahead of its closest rival. Le Point — a platform to denounce the victorious and "not replace one conservative editorialists in the cancer and the state-run news or in France in contrast to the more conservative editorialists in the same publication.

Reshuffle Denied

The incident occurred amid anticipation in Paris that under the new president, the Socialists will change many top officials — and indirectly many key journalists in the government-controlled radio and television stations, as well as in the commercial radio stations that broadcast into France from neighboring countries. Under previous French governments, the state-run media had become in-creasingly politicized — a trend that was an issue in the presidential campaign.

A Socialist spokesman has denied there were plans for an imminent reshuffle, saying that the par-ty hoped to relax government in-alists and the non-Communist left

Mr. Revel said that Sir James had been "inundated" with phone calls from Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's office, apparently complaining about the L'Express cover, which showed a tired-looking Mr. Giscard d'Estaing.

Mr. Todd, who approved the controversial cover, is a prominent writer and broadcaster who worked for leftist publications before joining L'Express in 1977. His editorials were often criticized as reflecting doctrinaire leftism. He

U.S. Expected to Vote 'No' or Abstain On WHO Baby Food Marketing Code

By Axel Krause

tional Herald Tribune PARIS - Representatives of the Reagan administration will either vote against or abstain from voting on a controversial international code that would curb marketing of breast-milk substitutes, adminis-tration and UN sources in Washington and Geneva said Thursday.

The State Department said Wednesday, "We cannot support the draft code," but did not indi-cate what action the U.S. representatives would take.

However, virtually all other nations from both developing and in-dustrialized regions of the world are expected to approve the code when it comes up on the agenda of the current World Health Assembly meeting in Geneva next Thursday, the sources said.

A U.S. abstention or vote against the code would mainly benefit the U.S. baby food industry, which has actively lobbied against potentially restrictive provisions, according to diplomatic and UN sources.

But the U.S. vote would by no means end the controversy, nnr should it be seen as a damaging blow to the World Health Organization, the sources said.

"A negative U.S. action, while regrettable, will not cause a lot of wringing of hands or tears. Most nations of the world favor the code," a UN official said.

Citing administration sources, The New York Times reported

Her comment fueled speculation among diplomats in Geneva that the administration may still be seeking a compromise, but the chances of the United States voting in favor of the code were rated as virtually zero by several UN diplomats, who cited statements made by top administration offi-cials in Washington during the past few days.

Richard S. Schweiker, secretary of health and human services, said Tuesday in Washington that the WHO code in its present form could not be enforced in the United States because it "runs contrary to the Constitution on the First Amendment" and would violate

Douglas A. Johnson, chairman of the Infant Formula Action Committee, one of several groups lobbying in favor of the code, was quoted by The New York Times as saying that the administration's opposition "would isolate the U.S. from its allies to protect an industry that has been highly criticized for the past decade and a half."

The baby food industry in the United States and Western Europe has strenuously opposed key provi-sions of the code, particularly those banning advertising and pro-motion of breast-milk substitutes.

The International Council of Infant Food Industries, representing 14 leading companies, including Nestle of Switzerland and Weyeth International of the United States, refrained from commenting on the Reagan administration's stance.
This is a purely government business and we have no comment to make," Stanislas Flache, the count cil's Geneva-based secretary-general, said Thursday.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing as a tired figure gazing at a television screen, which was filled with a sharp photograph of a distinctly energeticlooking Mr. Mitterrand.

L'Express editors defended it as an accurate image of the cam-paign's final week, when Mr. Giscard d'Estaine was on the defensive. But they conceded that they had tried and failed at the last minute to have the cover retouched to remove some wrinkles from Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's face.

The original cover showed the president looking at a blank television screen. It was an effort to de-pict Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's frustration at the hesitations of Mr. Mitterrand before engaging in the Inco-to-face debate. Shortly before press time, word came that the debate was on, so the editors added Mr. Mitterrand's picture without inreseeing, as one of them said, "how great the contrasts turned out to be."

But the cover, according to Mr. Revel, was "only a detail" in Sir James' reaction.

Sir James, who has pronounced conservative views and has written about alleged Soviet and Communist success in infiltrating and manipulating the Western press, has made no secret of his intention to see that his magazines, both in Britain and France, support the conservative leaders, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Mr.

Giscard d'Estaing. Earlier in the French election campaign, Sir James prevented distribution of an issue of his British newsmagazine NOW! because it contained an article critical of the French government. The magazine was closed last month after less than two years' publication, apparently because of heavy financial

During recent months when Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had been ex-pected to win re-election, there was persistent speculation that Sir James was preparing to buy Le Figaro to make it a counterweight in the Paris press to Le Mande, which has become increasingly anti-government in tone.

If convicted by an Italian court,
Mr. Agea is likely to be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Extradition Sought

No Hatred

Pope John Paul feels no hatred for his attacker and has forgiven him, according to Cardinal Carlo Confalonieri, the deacon of cardinals, one of the few prelates who was permitted to see the pontisf Wednesday night and Thursday.

The pope "harbors no resent-ment but jis showing) understanding and forgiveness" toward his assailant, the cardinal said Thursday night at a Mass in St. Peter's Basil

Ann Odre, 58, an American who was wounded in the chest by one of the gunman's bullets, was in the ntensive care section of the Santo Spirito Hospital near the Vatican on Thursday night after undergo-ing several hours of surgery.

Another woman wounded in the ttack, Rose Hall, reportedly the wife of a chaplain with U.S. troops in Wuerzburg, West Germany, has a fracture of the right arm that will take about two months to heal, hospital sources said.

Police said that the assailant fired four shots from a semi-automatic 9mm Browning pistol. They said the pope was hit by two bullets and the women by one each.

Prof. Cruciti, who directed the operating team, said Thursday that he thought it possible that the pontiff was hit by three hullets, one of which hit one of the women after glancing off the pope's forearm.

Many Italian newspapers expressed outrage at the attack in front-page editorials. In the past several days the pope had been criticized in many newspapers for recent speeches in which he told Italian Catholics they should vote in a referendum Sunday for repeal of the 3-year-old Italian law on le-

The papal secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, was flying to New York on a visit Wednesday when he was told of the attack on the pope. On arrival in New York, the cardinal turned around and caught the next avail-able flight back to Rome.

As long as Pope John Paul is incapacitated, the slightly built Cardinal Casaroli, who at age 66 has a prodigious capacity for work, will in effect be the acting chief of the church government. With or without instructions from the pope, he will issue directives to the Curia's staff of about 3,000, including prelates, priests, friars, nuns, and lay officials and employees. In addition to the Vatican secretary of state, Pope John Paul's personal staff is accustomed to handling church affairs during his absence. Because of the pope's many trips since taking office nearly three years ago, the Vatican today is probably better prepared to function for a few weeks without a direct papal hand than at any time in recent history.

Only the immediate entourage of Pope John Paul, which includes various Polish ecclesiastics, departed from its routine. One of the pope's personal secretaries, Monsignnr Stanislaw Dziwisz of Krakow. Poland, has remained at his side since he was struck down Wednesday afternoon. Other papal aides, too, were staying close to the cope around the clock.

There are, however, a number of functions that, by church law or by his own ruling, only the pope can perform. Although it is not known how long the pope will be incapacitated, the attack on his life may affect the church in a number of

Code of Canon Law

The issuance of a long-awaited revised code of canon law, in process for more than a decade, had been expected early this summer, but unless he has already approved the document, it may be delayed by his convalescence.

The Vatican announced Thursday that because of the pope's injuries, his visit to Switzerland and the World Council of Churches headquarters in Geneva, scheduled for May 31 to June 5, had been called off. The trip was seen as especially important because of sen-timent among Protestants that Pope John Paul has been dragging his feet on Christian unity.

Appointments to major eburch posts throughout the world also require papal approval. There has been considerable speculation that Pope John Paul would call a consistory this spring to name new members to the Chilege of Cardi-nals, possibly including some U.S.

Quick Trip

Heightened activity was nb-served all day at the Secretariat of State, the nerve center of the Curia. Many among its polyglot staff of about 300 priests, nuns and lay employees had worked through the night, and were told by their superiors Thursday to prepare for extra hours in the days to come. From the moment the pope was wounded, the Secretariat of State kept in close touch with Italian authorities and foreign diplomats in Rome, and — by phone and telex — with cardinals, the heads of regional and national bishops' conferences and apostolic nuncios on all continents.

However, Pope John Paul in his sickbed might decide to lighten the burdens on Cardinal Casaroli by entrusting some responsibilities to other high prelates.

On recent occasions, the pope before starting on some of his journeys outside Italy asked Cardinal Panlo Bertoli, 75, a veteran papal diplomat, to handle some special assignments during his absence. Cardinal Casaroli usually accompanies the pope on his travels.

Aboard Salyut-6, the pair will meet Vladimir Kovalyonok and Victor Savinykh, who have been working there since March 14. The Soyuz-40 flight is the ninth involving a cosmonaut from another East-bloc state.

Congress Conferees Agree on a Budget Figure United Press International

WASHINGTON - Senate and House of Representatives conferees agreed Thursday on a compromise $695.4 billion budget that includes President Reagan's deep cuts in federal spending for the fiscal year 1982, beginning Oct. 1.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, the New Mexico Republican who is chairman of the Senate Budget Committee and head of the conference panel, said the measure should reach the House and Senate floors for final action

The agreement was a compromise between the House Budget Committee's $688.8-billion plan and the Senate committee's $700.8-billion proposal. It projects the the government will be in a $37.6-billion deficit next year, compared with the $45-billion figure that Mr. Reagan origibleeding. The surgeon also exam-ines those organs for the presence of clots that could kill quickly from a sudden hemorrhage if they later broke open.

Injuries to the pancreas can also lead to fatal complications from conditions such as pancreatitis. Early reports said that the abdominal wound had been at the level of the pancreas. However, it is premed that the pancreas was not injured, because a spokesman said that no vital organs were damaged. Surgeons also look for injuries to the aorta and vena cava, the major blood vessels in the abdomen.

In determining damage to the bowel, or intestine, the surgeon runs his hands through its entire length to examine each segment of the small intestine (about 20 feet) and the large intestine (about 5 feet), looking for holes that repre-sent potential life-threatening com-plications from the leakage of intestinal contents into the abdominal cavity.

Surgeons often sew up such holes if they are small. But if the holes are too big, or if the bullet has damaged the blood supply to an area of bowel or if a segment of intestine is shredded, among other factors, surgeons resect the affected area of bowel, removing a piece of intestine and sewing the two ends together.

The general rule is "if in doubt, resect," said Joseph Wilder, a surgeon at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York who has had wide experience with gunshot wounds.

Hospital officials did not say whether the intestine removed from the pope was large or small and they did not state the length of the resected portions. In general, resections of the large intestine are more serious than those of the small intestine and about twice as difficult to do, according to Dr.

The chief concern from bullet wounds to the large intestine is the serious infections such as periton-itis that can result from contamination from feces. The types of bacteria that inhabit the large intestine are much different, and more dangerous, than those in the

A Modest Pension

According to the Italian police, he appears to have come to Italy for the first time last November or December. He stayed at the same pension in Rome where he stayed this week before he went to St. Peter's - the Isa, a modest place, near the Piazza Cayour.

At the end of January, he was apparently in Rome again. A few days later, he turned up in Milan and narrowly escaped arrest. He was spotted by another Turk in a restaurant near La Scala. The second Turk tipped off the Turkish Consulate, but Mr. Agea had fled by the time police arrived to try to detain him.

Then, on either April 3 or April 8, he went to Perugia in central Italy. He registered as a student at the University for Foreigners on April 9 and attended two Italian classes the next day. . .

During one of his visits, he brought into the country the weapon with which he is accused of shooting the pope — a 9mm Browning long pistol. Intelligence sources said it was made in Belgium in 1976 and could have been bought almost anywhere in West-ern Europe. Mr. Agea said he bought it "abroad" and left it in the baggage room at a railroad station in a major Italian ciry, pre-sumably Rome, picking it up when he needed it for the assassination attempt. After April 10, the day he paid his hotel bill and left Perugia, police believe he visited several other Italian cities, but they have not disclosed which ones. On April 23, Mr. Agca was in Milan, where he booked a package tour to Spain at a travel agency, paying almost $500 for a two-week visit to Palma de Mallorca, including air fare, hotel and meals.

With about 100 ftalian tourists, he left Milan on April 25 and spent 15 days on holiday at the spent 15 days on holiday at the Hotel Flamboyant. The hotel's director and a hostess for the tour both recognized his photos Thursday, according to ANSA, the Italian news agency. ANSA said he seemed a normal person to the hotel staff took part in all the greater than the seemed and the seem tel staff, took part in all the organized excursions and spent about $100 there.

On May 9, the tourist group returned to Milan, landing at Mal-pensa airport. Mr. Agea cleared mmigration controls without difficulty, using his "Faronk Osgun" passport Investigators believe that he boarded a train at the small town of Busio Arsizio, about 20 miles (32 kilometers) northeast of Milan on the road to Malpensa, within a short time after his plane anded

Last Monday, the would-be as-sassin appeared again at the pen-sion Isa. It is not known where he was in the interim but there is no record of his having stayed in Perugia, where he told the police he had stopped. At the Isa, Mr. Ages made a number of telephone calls. If the police know to whom the calls went, they are keeping the information quiet for now.

Two days after his return to Rouse, Mr. Agea walked into St. Peter's Science with thousands of pilgrims, for the pope's regular public andience on a radiant late spring afternoon that was soon broken by grashots.

Ah, the food in Europe! It's really something else. You'll sample the kinds of treats you wish you could share with the folks you left behind. So make their mouths water. Give 'em a call. But be sure to check these

mark-saving tips first. SAVE ON SURCHARGES

Many hotels outside the U.S. charge exorbitant surcharge fees on international calls. And sometimes the fees are greater than the cost of the call itself. But if your hotel has TELEPLAN, the way to keep hotel surcharges reasonable, go ahead and call, No Teleplan? Read on!

There are other ways to save money.

SAVE WITH A SHORTIE In most countries there's no threeminute minimum on self-dialed calls. So if your hotel offers International Dialing from your room, place a short call home and have them call you back. The surcharge on short calls is low. And you pay for the callback from the States with dollars, not local currency, when you get your next home or office phone bill.

SAVE THESE OTHER WAYS Telephone Company credit card and collect calls may be placed in many countries. And where they are, the hotel surcharges on such calls are usually low. Or, you can avoid surcharges altogether by calling from the post office or from other telephone centers. SAVE NIGHTS & WEEKENDS Always check to see whether the country you're in has lower rates at night and on weekends: Usually the

The senior White House official's remarks came as presidential aides were savoring two big legisla-tive victories by Mr. Reagan. Last week the Democratic-controlled House adopted, hy a vote of 253-176, a package of deep spending cuts sought by the president. And on Tuesday the Republican-controlled Senate adopted Mr. Reagan's plan 78-20.

The substantial margins in both voics were swollen by the defection of Democrats who supported Mr. Reagan. Accordingly, administration officials have repeatedly expressed confidence that they would not have to compromise on the proposed tax cuts, which call for $44 billion in personal tax cuts and nearly $10 billinn in business tax cuts next year.

Government Borrowing

Among financial analysis there is considerable disagreement about whether recent fluctuations in the financial markets indicate a lack of confidence in Mr. Reagan's pro-posals. Many business leaders have wholeheartedly endorsed the Reagan proposals, and many administration aides have maintained that the markets were responding in such outside factors as the recent growth in the money

The official suggested several times that the conditions in the financial markets had shaken members of the administration, who had been hoping that legislative progress on the Reagan economie package would cheer Wall Street.

Instead, the official said, there was an apparent lack of confidence on Wall Street in the government's ability to close its future budget deficits, presumably touched off by huge borrowing by the Treasury Department in the first quarter of this year.

fect of budget deficits, amounted to $64 billion in the first quarter, compared with $37 billion in the same quarter a year ago. The Treasury had to do most of its borrowing in the first quarter for extraneous reasons, the official said, but he acknowledged that the bond markets were "shellshocked" hy the magnitude of it.

Board was failing in its attempt to hold down the growth in the money supply, he said. All these factors, he added, have come together to give the administration a new feeling of urgency about getting its economic program passed quickly.

WASHINGTON (LAT) - Told that even the Republican-run Sen-ate Finance Committee would not support President Reagan's current three-year, 30-percent tax cut plan, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said Wednesday that the administration was willing to con-sider a "superior" alternative.

Treasury Secretary's View

The secretary, testifying at the committee's first day of hearings on the proposed across-the-board $293.2-billing tax cut, conceded that its depreciation provisions might unintentionally subsidize some businesses. Secretary Regan replied: "The president sees no need to change his program. We have seen no other program that achieves these same objectives. If we can be shown something that is superior, in other words, with more bang for the buck, we'd be more than willing to take a look at that."

The Senate Finance Committee will defer action on the tax cut proposal until the House acts, Sen. Dole said. Both houses hope to hammer out an agreement by July 15 on spending cuts, and then tn take up the tax plan for action by Nearly a half-century after Congress authorized this most endur-ing of New Deal programs, the ad-ministration asked the legislators to undertake what no president had proposed before: a general lowering of benefits.

NEWS ANALYSIS

To be sure, as officials insisted, there would be no reductions in monthly payments for anyone who is already on the rolls or who achieves that status by Dec. 31.

But for those who become beneficiaries after 1981, benefits under the legislation proposed Tuesday would be lower than they would be under present law. That would be true not only for those who take retirement at the age of 62, 63 or 64, but also for people who start drawing benefits at 65 or later.

On the latter point, the eightpage "fact sheet" published by the Department of Health and Human services said little.

The history of Social Security since passage of the enabling legislation in 1935 is one of repeated broadening of coverage and sweetening of benefits, usually with no parallel increase in the Originally, benefits were to he paid only to retired workers. Bit by bit, Congress added wives, children, the disabled, their wives and children, early retirement and au-tomatic cost-of-living increases.

With the economy prospering after World War II, with inflation a minor irritant in the range of I percent or so, and with a high ratio of taxpaying workers to beneficiaries, Social Security sailed through the halcyon years untroubled.

The halcyon years ended in the 1970s. Stagflation superimposed an ugly question mark on the assumption that the standard of living would go up unfailingly. The country discovered what a few of-ficials and members of Congress had known all along: that Social Security benefits were paid ou a current basis by working people.

The payroll tax and the taxable wage base started climbing with dismaying speed. The experts saw even more trouble ahead, with a greatly diminished ratio of workers to beneficiaries.

With the old-age trust fund likely to run out of money by Septemanxieties of the 36 million benefici-

One-sweetener was a possible reduction in the payroll tax, from the increases now scheduled. But any such reduction would be contingent on the trust fund's reach:

scaling back of benefits for future beneficiaries would be certain. That scaling back would result from two changes in the way initial benefits are calculated. Both are highly technical. Pierre Bourgault, one of the best-known Quebec nationalists, has given up on Mr. Levesque altogether. Mr. Bourgault, a 47-yearold journalist, lecturer and teacher, spoiled his ballot rather than vote for the party. He then created a stir by publishing an article in the Paris newspaper Le Monde that called the re-election a "tragic victory" and accused Mr. Levesque of having "assassinated" the idea of independence.

"Do you want absolute proof that it is dead?" he asked. "The price of houses io Montreal has contioued to rise." He recalled the moments of panic that followed the party's victory in 1976, when some people rushed to get their money out of Quebec and put their the strength of party's victory in 1976, when some people rushed to get their money out of Quebec and put their money out of Quebec and put their houses up for sale, and reflected

Mr. Bourgault said he favored a return of the party to opposition stalus as the only way to get rid of Mr. Levesque and reforge its ideol-ogy. Mr. Bourgault's position has been an extreme one, and he ac-knowledged that he was isolated. He said: "Everyone says that

But Mr. d'Allemagne criticized the way the party has used its pow-er up to now, offering the view that the party had created a trap for itself by furnishing what he said was one of the best governments Ouchoc has ever had. "Some people wonder why independence is necessary when Quebec is so well governed under the present system," he said.

The Rally dissolved itself in 1968, when Mr. Levesque, who quit the Liberal Party a year be-fore, formed the Parti Quebecois. Mr. Bourgault, Mr. Chaput and Mr. d'Allemagne said they had some doubts even then, because while they talked only of independence Mr. Levesque was seeking a new association with the rest of Canada. Personal resentments were created when Mr. Levesque kept the old-line militants out of positions of influence in the new party because in the public view they appeared too radical and dan-

In the 1973 elections the party won 30 percent of the vote, but its strategists decided that if it was ever to win power it had to reassure people a little more. The policy of gradualism was adopted, according to which no move would be made toward independence unless a referendum gave a specific mandate to a Parti Quebecois government. In 1976 this policy sueceeded beyond all expectations. and a party dedicated to independence was in power in Quebec for the first time.

But four years later, when a re-

After the adverse vote. Mr. Levesque promised to respect the decision and to hold no new referendum in a second term

For the most militant supporters of independence, the party's wine has been watered far too much. and when the party holds a convention later this year a sharp debate on future strategy is expected. But both inside and outside the party, strong nationalists are pushing for more militant action. # This Time, the Pope Again, the Dilemma of Protection

Again. For so many people around the world, that must have been the first word to come to mind when they learned that Pope John Paul II had fallen victim to an assassin's bullets. It happened just six weeks after the shooting of President Reagan. But it also came toward the end of a generation that began with the murder of President Kennedy. The killing of public figures has become so commonplace in the last 20 years that it no longer surprises. The assassination attempt against the pope produced a sense of shock in some, anger in others and frustration on one level at our inability to offer our leaders better forms of protection, hut at a much deeper level, at our inability to understand why our world hreeds so many mad killers.

Mad, absurd and irrational were the words chosen by writers, philosophers, politicians and theologians to express their inability to grasp what is happening. "I don't understand." said the Nobel prizewinning poet Czeslaw Milosz. "I just don't understand." There is a sense that the once well-ordered cosmos is reverting to the primordial confusion of chaos. Some have tried to explain it by reference to the unending wars in the Middle East, Southeast Asia, Northern Ireland and elsewhere. Perhaps it is in part hecause modern communications puts those wars in every living room, in every hut that has a radio, and the message they transmit to many people is hopelessness.

In some ways this pastoral pope, who in less than three years has become the most widely traveled head of the Roman Catholic Church in history, has directed his papacy precisely toward the amorphous, hut deadly disease that seems to afflict mankind in the second half of the 20th century. He has devoted himself to reversing what he perceives as a moral decline in the Church and in the world by reimposing order and by returning to the simple truths of the early Church Fathers. He preaches universal love, unselfconscious charity that values the poor as the elect of the earth, and strict moral order. And he does so in a context of political sophistica-tion sharply honed in Communist Poland. Perhaps he more than anyone should have understood his vulnerability, almost the inevitability of this happening. Yet after being shot, Pope John Paul was quoted as asking, "How could they do this?"

Although there was only one assassin, the pope was right in saying "they." Mehmet Ali Agca, the prime suspect, may have acted alone in St. Peter's Square, but in a larger sense, he was the agent of the terrorists of the left and of the right, of the authoritarian governments of the left and the right and of all those who debase the value of human life. Given the nature of man and the fluidity of the modern world, can future attacks be prevented? Some, prohably, hut at a tremendous cost in freedom. It is a dilemma that all lead-

The Shooting in Rome

One more time, the witnesses described a sound "like firecrackers." Then the central figure in the crowd staggered and fell. Again, the gunman was quickly seized and immediately identified himself. If the identification is correct, he is a product of the savage street warfare that was running in the Turkish cities before the army took over the country. But it seems that he had no permanent allegiance to any of the factions, having little more than a loose relation to some of the most hloody-minded — essentially his own one-man party, whose program was violence and whose purpose was assassination as an end in itself. Imprisoned earlier for murder, he had escaped and threatened to kill the pope during his Turkish visit. Then, a year and a half later, in St. Peter's Square, the gunman got close enough to shoot.

Getting close to this pope is not difficult. More than most - perhaps more than any in modern times - he has felt a moral responsibility to travel endlessly, show himself everywhere, mingle withthe crowds, talk and listen to all sorts of people everywhere. He has used that continual contact to demonstrate his concern for them with a warmth and clarity that has made him an uncommon force in the world's affairs. It will be a long time before any outsider knows much about the pope's role in, for example, the recent events in his native Poland, But it is already clear that he has worked powerfully for peaceful compromise and wider freedoms for Poland's people. His stature and his interest in the country have also provided one more good reason against intervention by Poland's east-

It is always the contrast between the assassin, as a person, and his target that is the most poignant and appalling quality of these shootings. Of the two, one always seems to have an extraordinary ability to draw people to him, and the other suffers the utter and fatal lack of it. Measured by their respective capacities for faith, hope and charity, these two men represent the opposite ends of the Rome, like Washington, used to have a deserved reputation as an unhealthy place to live. Both were swampy and hug-ridden, damp in winter and tropical in summer. The engineers and the doctors, between then, have rid both places of typhoid and malaria. But there is another ancient disease, also apparently contagious, that keeps cropping up. hoth in Rome and here, for which there seems to be no remedy.

'Is Nothing Sacred?'

Because the word "charisma" has been carelessly appended to every politician with a good smile and every rock star capable of unnerving adolescents, one hesitates to use it when describing Karol Wojtyla. Until, that is, one reads again the dictionary definition: "An extraordinary power of healing; a personal magic."

Part of John Paul II's charisma - his personal magic — is that he seems to encapsulate history. In him one sees not just a pope but 2,000 years of the papacy. And yet the image that leaped to many minds at the news that he'd heen shot was far removed from that of a figure on a balcony bestowing hlessings ad urbi et orbi.

Instead it was of a man seated in Madison Square Garden nearly two years ago responding to the songs, cheers and gifts (a guitar, a T-shirt and jeans) of 19,000 high school students with a low-pitched "Woo, woo, woo" - the Polish equivalent of "Wow!" And Wednesday he was, as is his custom, standing in his jeep, bolding out his arms to

One person, hearing of this latest assassination attempt on a world leader, asked "Is nothing sacred?" He was referring not to the measure of John Paul's days (in God's eyes. the saying goes, all men are equal), but to the protection seemingly imposed by his role. Even the pope is reported to have said "How could they have done this?" The answer is, of course, that no one and nothing is safe from someone's rage or madness. Surprise, then, is no longer the response to the news that yet another leader's life has been threatened. Instead there is only a world's grief when the attempt succeeds, and its deep gratitude when, as now, and as with the president, it

Attack on the Pope

There were and there are many dark organizations, secret beadquarters supporting Mehmet Ali Agca, the accused attacker of the Pope John Paul II.

With their help, Mr. Agca was able to escape from prison and reside comfortably in West Germany for a while. The attempt at the pope's life is the doing of a hloodthirsty organization.

— From Cumhuriyet (Ankara).

There are monsters like Mr. Agca in any society but, nevertheless, this is a sad event for the Turkish nation ... Damn those who bave led Mr. Agca in this path, damn them a million times. Turkey has demanded extradition of many Turkish terrorists abroad including Mr. Agea but the demands were rejected by European security organizations for one reason or another. Do these organizations now see what price is being paid for these follies?

- From Hurriyet (Ankara).

The attack on the pope was the result of hatred, and it was an expected occurrence. For a precedent to this horrible crime one must go back to the Middle Ages when the papacy was the stake of temporal power struggle. Our hope is that the attempt was the work of a crazy person. Nevertheless, in reality, the sacrilege grew in an atmosphere of emotional and ideological tensions which made it possible. The pope himself was conscious of the growing threats on his person and that Vatican officials had informed the Italian interior minister of growing fears. Because of the attempt on the pope's life, we urge the United Nations to take action to curb international terrorism. Cooperation among nations has practically eradicated piracy and greatly minimized hijacking. Now it is the time for the United Nations to deal with terrorists. # Is the Army Fit to Fight?

On Assassinations: The Deadly Fringe

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — To those standing at news tickers, watching in dismay urgent dispatches about the shooting of the pope, the most chilling moment came with the oormal process of news coverage: "For release only on Confirmation of Death" was the top line followed Death" was the top line, followed by the customary prepared obitu-

As that was being transmitted, other machines thumped and clacked more reassuring news that the wounds did not appear to be mortal and that hospital authori-ties no longer used the word "grave" to describe the condition

In the aftermath, we should recognize that in nonpolice states, presidents, popes and pop stars face a worldwide epidemic of assassination. Whether the work of madmen or terrorists, each at-tempt generates the publicity that gives the idea to others.

Pressing Their Luck

What can be done to reduce the danger to the celebrated without appearing to quaver before the demented? How can political and demented? How can political and spiritual leaders press the flesh without pressing their luck too far? One good answer is in a memo now being circulated at the White House and Secret Service. The author is Richard Moore, a Washington attorney who was a campaign adviser to George Bush and a long-time aide to Richard Nixon.

In his memo, Mr. Moore recalls Mr. Nixon's words as the news was flashed that an attempt had been made on the life of President Ford: "He was probably in a Ford: "He was probably in a crowd where the assassin knew in advance that he would be coming." Sure enough, the attempt had been made as Mr. Ford was en route from his hotel to an announced destination.

Mr. Moore asks what the following events have in common: the killing of Robert Kennedy coming out of a hotel; the crippling of George Wallace as he walked toward his car after a scheduled speaking appearance in a shopping center; the two attempts on Mr. Ford's life as he was leaving speaking engagements; the shooting of President Reagan as he walked from a hotel to his car after a scheduled appearance.

Perilous Moments

"The perilous moments," writes the man who has accompanied campaigners on thousands of events, "do not occur at a public event.... They occur on the fringe of public events, the demonstrated 'deadly fringe' — entering and leaving the event itself."

The shooting of the pope took place as he was moving through the crowd on his way to a general audience. Although the slow prog-ress of the "popernobile" is like an open-car parade, the pattern bolds. The most vulnerable moment is not at an event, but on the way to and from, especially when the route is known. . "I did that sort of thing myself," Mr. Moore quotes Nixon, "al-though I usually tried to do it on a surprise basis. That is when you are safest. I do think the time has come for a president to avoid get-ting too close to a crowd when some potential assassin with a gun knows that the president is going Leaders are rarely attacked while addressing multitudes. Not once in this century has anyone attempted to assassinate a president or presidential candidate making a speech in an enclosed area such as an auditorium or convention hall. The target is far away; a handgun is inaccurate, a gumnan is likely to be jostled, as happened in the attempt on President-elect Roosevelt."

in 1933. Few nuts are expert so marksmen; most need to get in

No Open Cars

Here is how leaders can stay "close to the people" without unnecessarily endangering their lives:
First, they should eliminate the "deadly fringe" surrounding scheduled events. Drive up on the sidewalk and park laterally flush against stage doors, or go through secured underground garages, or use unlikely entrances and exits.

Second, forget open cars. Leaders should use the "Eisenhower bubble-top" if they want to see and be seen on parade. And the bulletproof vest is a must: For a bulletproof vest is a must: For a priest taking care shows no lack of faith, and for a politician, being prudent shows no lack of courage.

Surprise

Finally, they should use the element of surprise. Working the fence at a scheduled airport rally is highly dangerous; stopping at random along an unannounced route and plunging into a crowd is quite an accordance of the pictures of human contact are the same, but, as Mr. Moore writes, "the odds against an management of the assassin finding himself standing management are many milions to one.

ons to one."

The answer to this generation's water European of assassination epidemic is not for leaders to isolate themselves; the answer is for them to reduce their risk. When not even the safety of the pope is sacred, leaders every where are obliged to avoid the deadly fringe and to employ the classical deadles. ement of surprise.

Sugar and EEC Protectionism

By Jonathan Power

factory near Liverpool is only a modest news story in a part of the world where factories close every day and what concern there was been has focused on the loss of another 1,500 jobs for British work-

It has been, however, a front-page story in the oewspapers of Mauritius, Fiji and Barbados. Another nail in the coffin of their fragile economies, it is argued, another piece of evidence that the European Economic Community is a rich man's club that will use the rhetoric of the free market, the open economy, Adam Smith and the rest when it suits them. But, when it has painful choices to make, it will always find against the developing countries, who, let it be said, could do very well if capitalist economies stayed closer to their free market principles. The elosure of the Merseyside sugar refinery, owned by Tate and Lyle, the firm which provides the EEC nations with most of their refined sugar cane, was made as a result of an EEC decisioo in February to cut the British sugar quota

— a decision that had to be made partly because sugar coosumption has been declining.

Political Muscle But although Britain's sugar

beet farmers have taken a share of the cut, it very much looks, as al-ways, that they had the political muscle to make sure that the EEC let the hurden of adjustment fall on far away cane producers.

In fact, for the best part of six years, the EEC's agricultural policies have been working to favor the domestic beet farmers at the expense of the overseas cane farmers. Although both cane and beet refiners receive common EEC support prices for their output, be-cause of the different nature of the transitioo from raw material to finished product, the support is worth five times more to the beet refiners than 10 the cane. Thus, the beet sugar producers have been able to undercut the cane sugar sellers by as much as $40 a ton.

It is not a sensible policy, apart from the odd country like Jamaica

For Mauritius and the Caribbean, both in areas of frequent cyclones, sugar is one of the few cash crops with high resistance to hurricane damage. It also has the virtue, for a country with chronic unemployment, of being highly labor intensive. Fortpoately, thanks to the Lome

Convention, the articles of agreement between the EEC and the former subjects of empire, the EEC cannot renounce its longstanding basic commitment to these Third World producers. But the Lome Convention is being whittled away around the edges, with decisions like the Tate and Lyle one. Another example was the refusal by the EEC members to raise the overall sugar quota de-spite the admittance to Lome membership last 'year of Zim-babwe, traditionally a significant cane grower. And this week, Third World tempers have flared again when the EEC decided to increase the price of their raw sugar by a smaller amount than that awarded to the sellers of the refined prod-

Big Apple Seeks Slice of Foreign Clothing Market

By Hebe Dorsey

TEW YORK Lox and mages at the Macy's, mustrooms and champagne at the Boomingdale's, crossants and coffee at Bergdorf Goodman's, all that plus a new way. TEW YORK - Lox and basels at of shopping via computers and video discs. The New York fashion industry put itself out for its First World Buyers Week, with a secand one scheduled six menths from now.

Unabashedly calling itself "fashion capital of the world," the Big Apple, at the instiga-tion of Gov. Hugh Carey, launched its $1-million campaign to lure foreigners to buy American. Since the trend has been in the apposite direction for so long, it took the povernor's assistant, Isabel Leeds, two years to put the campaign on the road.

The New York show, which ends today, is mill a long way from big European fashion ters, such the Paris international ready-toyear salon, which draws 50,000 buyers. Here, a west salon, which draws 50,000 buyers, riere, and 1,200 foreign buyers turned up and they were mostly from lackluster, wohime oriented harkets such as West Germany, England and Japan. New York's fashion industry backs all the help it can get. Between economic conditions and the practice of moving manufacturing to the South or offshore, th ashion labor force has dipped from 350,000 uq 200,000 in the last 10 years. .

That's why the need for foreign markets.
"We should have done it 10 years ago," Miss Leeds said. "We have a labor force in New York that can serve 150 million women." Part of the delay was because it was not easy to convince U.S. manufacturers, who only know their vast home market. They were not willing to do business abroad and tackle a number of problems including language, sizes and seasons. Still, out of more than a thou-sand Seventh Avenue manufacturers, 228 house in which they might be interested. participated at the cost of $1,000 apiece.

Some were very well known, such as Oscar de la Renta, Ralph Lauren, Kasper, and old-time stars such as Pauline Trigere and Mollie Parnia. Others such as Perry Ellis and Calvin Klein, the new wave of American fashion, were moticeably missing. Ellis said he was expanding fast enough already and was not mixious to bite off more than he could chew, Klein (who gave his yearly business retail volume as $600 million) said he was only interested in opening his own boutiques. He already has one in London and is planning to open a second in Milan soon.

Computerized Buying System

The World Buyers Week's center of activities was the Parsons School of Design on Seventh Avenue. The major attraction was the computerized buying system. First, buyers had to register and get a card. By sliding it into a computer, they got a series of questions, starting with: "What language do you want to speak?" That being settled, they were asked to indicate which kind of garment they were interested in.

If they said "Sportswear," they were then given options including designers collections only, coordinates, blazers, pants, shorts, culottes, jeans, skirts, blouses, T-shirts, cotton knit sweaters, acrylic knit sweaters, other yarns sweaters, swimwear and active sportswear. They were also asked their favorthe sizes and price ranges. After they finished punching answer to those questions, they got a list of the appropriate houses, each of which had a number.

They then went over to other computers equipped with video discs where they could house in which they might be interested. Having gotten an idea of what the market could offer, they could then trek off to the showmoms concentrated in a four-block

As long as Americans want to export there was a feeling among foreign buyers that this might well be a new market, especially for medium-priced clothes. Maurice Kendal, for one, who with his wife owns a chain of six boutiques in Manchester, said they came because it was a chance at looking at different merchandise and keeping ahead of the competition. They were impressed with the or-ganization and professionalism behind such houses as Liz Claiborne, which makes attractive yet realistic clothes for career women

Whether or not American designers are ready to compete with Europeans on a creativity level remains to be seen. There is no question that sportswear an American stuple, is cutting more and more into the fashion cake and that, with the vogue for lei-sure lifestyle clothes, Americans stand a good

But there is also a growing strength of American designers who now have talent as well as business sense. Alongside older designers who survive and prosper hy copying Europe, the younger generation increasingly turns out a new, distinctly American style casy, simple, casual.

An encouraging sign that American fash-ion is coming into its own is a group of SoHo designers, who showed last Sunday in a loft, converted into a cafe, with harp music in the hackground. It's oot that what they showed was so great, but that they could exist at all was interesting in a city long dominated by hig business Seventh Avenue.

Wolf Biermann: 'Prussian Blues Singer

By Ann Sussman International Herald Tribuna

HAMBURG -- When Wolf Bi-ermann lived in East Berlin he wrote songs that were danger-ous. He sang about the East Ger-man accessed for dancing the boogie. He sang about the cherry orchard where the signs read: Prop-erty of the People — Strict Surveil-lance. The authorities, he said, feared his guitar more than a ma-Today Biermann, 45, lives in

He does not label himself a protest singer either. "I'm a Prussian blues singer," he says. "Blues is not only black music. Blues is the existence Short, with warm blue eyes and gentle manner, Biermann does not look much like a revolutionary. But he still is. "My problem is to find a way to fight with the dragon I live with now, not the dragon on the other side of the world," he said. He has no sympathy for dissi-dents who "do nothing but show their Eastern wounds in the Western world." Since he now lives in the West, he feels he must "learn about the new society and join its

Now, he says, "I'm only sitting on my tail and writing," During his 4½ years in the West he has given concerts throughout Europe, produced three records and writproduced three records and written a children's book. Talent runs in the family. His step-daughter, Nina Hagan, also came West and has since become a punk rock star.

Biermann feels that it is time to enter "new lands" with his poetry.

His songs — rooted in German cabaret and French folk traditions - are known for a simple, revolutionary message: A real socialist society is possible if the East German state lives by its original ide-

French Try To Bolster The Franc

By Jack Aboaf

PARIS - French monetary authorities appear to have ahan-doned the outward calm shown the day after the election of François Mitterrand as the first Socialist president of France in 23 years.

In a series of unprecedented moves, the Bank of France has shown the government's determi-nation to use all necessary tools to check what appears to be a steady run on the franc.

It increased its key intervention rate on the money market to 16 percent on Monday from 13½ percent o week earlier, and then agaio to a record 15 percent on Thurs-

Spending Billions

The French central bank also has spent billions of francs in support of its currency in an attempt to stop it from breaking through the permissible floor level in relation to the Deutsche mark within the European Monetary System.

The franc, however, managed Thursday to come off the floor, albeit slightly, in relation to the Deutsche mark at the official fixing — for the first time this week — when the DM was quoted at 2,4920 francs, compared to the permissible floor rate of 2.4930.

Although it is difficult at this stage to gauge the effectiveness of the measures, the Bank of France kly statement published Thursday gives some indication of the Reserra BASEL - Swiss chemical firms are making a radical review of their strategies in the face of stagnating profits and worsening industry pros-pects worldwide, industry sources said.

The industry has begun to realize that the harsh times seen since the sharp oil price rise of 1973 are more indicative of the future than the postwar boom which lasted through the '60s, they added.

The industry is faced with mounting pressure on margins, growing ecological problems and greater government control over the prices and registration of pharmaceutical products.

Ciba-Geigy's review of its operations mainly involves a critical look at the products it manufactures. It has recently dropped a large portion of the unprofitable photographic business doce by its liford subsidiary and bought a successful Swiss company specializing in laboratory instruments.

Close Look at Products

Samuel Koechlin, executive committee chairman, said the firm is examining whether a number of industrial products are still worthwhile. Many of these started off as specialties, but after years of imitation and competition, have declined to the status of commodities with little earning power.

Hoffmann-La Roche, whose group net profit rose in 1980 to 232 million Swiss francs ($112 million) from 219 million, has begun a reappraisal of its research activities.

The company's deep involvement in genetic en-gineering, centering on the drug Interferon, means research in some other fields will suffer, sources said. The company has warned staff that jobs will be lost as it abandons other projects.

The company has tried in the past two years to widen its range of pharmaceutical products be-yond its highliers of the past. Valium and Librium, whose earnings have been eroded by imitations and the expiry of patents.

The scope of the review goes further than any other of the past decade, the sources said. Sandoz is concentrating on its Basel-hased parent company, where turnover and profits are virtually static while the rest of the group is performing fairly well. Group net profit last year rose to 202 million francs from 173 million.

these techniques, he declared, "might not be good." He apparently based this opinion on the gener-ally accepted estimate that large amounts of natural gas are being found in the United States.

Mr. Noble, 53, soft-spoken and bespectacled, also said that:

He would seek to create what he called a peer review board to evaluate projects seeking government aid, presumably to act as a backstop to the corporation's sev-en-member board.

· He had already made overtures to industry for individual meetings in which he would explain the national security implications of synthetic fuel development and appeal to patriotic impulses as well as the profit motive.

• It would be difficult to reach the mandated synthetic fuel production goals of the oil equivalent of 500,000 barrels a day by 1987 and 2 million barrels by 1992.

WASHINGTON - Edward E.

Managing Director Marc Moret has said the parent company has become top-beavy. He expects a restructuring of parent company management and reduction of staff.

The Swiss chemical industry is expected to concentrate on highly developed products, keep a closer eye on profitability, and act faster and more decisively to cut back hastness where earnings lag, the sources said.

No Letup Seen

The Swiss chemical industry will also avoid risky diversification into activities outside traditional spheres of husiness.

The Swiss see little prospect of a letup in the pressures on margins. Competition is likely to become stronger as more governments try to huild up domestic chemical industries, the sources said. Volatile interest and exchange rates are likely to need a larger profit margin to be absorbed safely.

The sources said with ecological pressures mounting there is no guarantee that the Swiss will be able to steer clear of paying heavy compensation costs for such developments as smon disease in Japan. (Ciba-Geigy and some other firms ac-knowledged in 1977 that anti-diarrhea medicines they manufactured had a causal relationship with the nerve-paralyzing disease.) Toxicological tests required on new medicines will be more rigorous.

General opinion in top management is that risks overall are likely to increase rather than diminish, and that present profit margins amounting often to little more than 2 percent of turnover are too slim for comfort.

However, top management feels that the changes now being introduced are being made from a position of still relative strength. Although Ciba-Geigy's group net profit dropped to 305 million Swiss francs in 1980 from 327 million, its performance compared favorably with major world competitors because of its conservative inflation-accounting methods, Bourse analysts said.

Sandoz and Hoffmann-La Roche also did well in 1980 compared with competitors in West Germany, France and Italy. Only in the United States was performance generally better, due to a freer market climate, they said.

trading of American Stock Exchange issues. Brokers said market averages were helped by hargain hunters who found some stocks selling at attractive prices following the market's slide the past three weeks. But observers said the relatively slow turnover indicated institutions were sitting on the sidelines waiting for the Federal Reserve report late Friday oo the oation's money supply.

Surge Expected

There is considerable speculatioo in the investment community that the Fed will report a surge in the money supply, thus continuing pressure on the central bank to keep credit tight.

Several major banks Thursday lowered their broker loan rates to 19% and 20 percent. Manufacturers Hanover cut its rate to 20 percent from 201/2 percent, while Chase Manhattan and Chemical Bank lowered their rates to 191/2 percent from 201/2.

Economist Alan Greenspan warned Thursday that cootinued high interest rates could endanger the U.S. economy. He told the Senate Finance Committee that the "inflation premium" built into interest rates will be removed only when there is hard evidence of a slowdown in federal spending.

Dollar Strong

The dollar continued surong in trading on European currency markets Thursday, with dealers at-tributing the strength to rising U.S. interest rates.

In Frankfurt, the dollar hit a 3½-year high of 2,3075 Deutsche marks, dipping slightly to 2,3072 DM near the close, up from 2,2918

William J. Gillard, Kidder's director of investment policy, attributes this upward valuation process to "the market's adjustment to the expected nature of the environment down the road apiece, as public- and private-sector policies" work toward a reduction of infla-

"in other words, we're witnessing a market that is broadening, and rightly so," he said. This process will be of most benefit to fastgrowth sectors of the market, he said, "despite the big gains already seen in price-earnings multiples."

Whether it is a sign of overen-thusiasm or astuteness, the empha-sis on high-multiple stocks in April proved currently profitable. Even though many high-multiple oil stocks have disappeared from the top-50 list in the past several months, the median result for 50 favored issues last month was a gain of 4 percent, compared with a decline of 2.3 percent in the Stan-dard & Poor's 500 index.

The above-average performance of the top 50, assuming one could invest anew in the median company each month, now extends over quite a number of time periods.

For the past three months, for ex31, for example, the number of energy-related stocks climbed from 4 ergy-related stocks climbed from 4 up 13.7 percent against 2.5 percent for the S&P index; over the past year, the comparison was 66.2 per-cent vs. 25 percent, respectively: for two years 79.7 percent vs. 30.5 percent; and since 1972, 21.5 percent vs. 12.5 percent.

But achieving such results also would have required nimbleness, especially in recent months, as the composition of the high-multiple list of favorites changed substan-

Gulf to Seek Cut in Oil Price by Nigeria

NEW YORK - Gulf Oil plans to ask Nigeria, its largest foreign crude cil supplier, for a reduction in the price of high-quality crude from its current $40 a barrel level. Gulf said Wednesday that its representatives would ask Nigeria to lower its crude prices or else consider cutting back the amount of oil the company now receives from the African nation. The talks are being held in Nigeria. Gulf receives about 230,000 barrels of crude a day from Nigeria, the United States' second largest source of fareign crude after Saudi Arabia

U.S. analysts maintain oil produced by Nigeria, Libyo and Algeria — OPEC's three North African members — is overpriced at $40 to $41 a barrel in the glutted world oil market.

The average weighted price for Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries crude is just under $35 a barrel, with Saudi Arabia at the cartel low of $32 o barrel.

FCC Blocks AT&T Plan to Increase Some Rates, Lower Them Overseas

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commissioo, charging that the American Tele-phone & Telegraph Co. used inconsistent data to compute rate changes, is blocking a series of telephone rate increases that were to have gone into effect Thursday.

The commission had granted AT&T permission to raise interstate long-distance rates by 16 per-cent as of 12:01 a.m. Thorsday, it rescinded that decision Wednesday. The FCC said there were discrepancies in the figures AT&T used in reporting its overall rate base.

The decision immediately postponed 16-percent rate increases for

AT&T described the commission's concerns as "purely techni-cal rather than substantive," and said it would immediately provide the commission with the information occded to clear up the matter.

The commission said supporting documents filed by AT&T on Monday had raised new questions about whether the rate changes would allow the giant telephone company to exceed its authorized profit margin.

The major TV oetworks and several large corporations went to court Wednesday in an attempt to block the 16.4-percent increase. but their appeal for a temporary stay was turned down. The dispute between the FCC

Price-earnings multiples at the end of April ranged from a high of 46 for Computervision to a low of 17 for nine other stocks. The median multiple was 21, reflecting a willingness of investors to pay more than twice as much for these stocks' earnings per share than the nine times earnings accorded the S&P index at month-end.

Replacing the oils as the most dominant group was the technology sector, with 24 stocks making the top 50. This number has risen record high oil output has flooded the world market with relatively cheap crude and threateoed to from 17 at year-end 1979. ### Pittsburgh Jury Not Sympathetic To Woman Who Shaved Hairdo

United Press Inte

PITTSBURGH - A woman who shaved her bead rather than endure her hairdo has failed to win the sympathy of 10 women and two men on a Common Pleas Court jury.

The jury Wednesday refused to award Lillian Papale, 55, compensation for the time she spent waiting for her hair to grow back.

Miss Papale had contended that a $43 permanent she received at a department store beauty parlor in January left her with a hairdo she called a "disaster."

She said she returned to the beauty parlor several times, requesting the damage be repaired, before shaving her head in desperation.

The defense argued that Miss Papale received a competent permanent, but simply was dissatisifed with her new look.

him. The electric shocks begin. No questions are put to him. But as he moons and jumps with the shocks, the unseen torturers speak insults. Then one shouts a single word, and others take it up: "Jew ... Jew ... Jew Jew! Jew!" As they chant, they clap their hands and laugh.

Germany in 1939? No. Argentina in 1977. Were the torturers an outlaw band, a gang of ano-state terrorists? No, they were part of the state: military men from one wing of the armed forces that controlled the Argentine government in 1977 and still dn. And the victim: Was he some unlucky social outcast? No, he was Jacobo Timerman, editor and publisher of a leading Buenos Aires daily newspaper, La Opinion. And in a sense he was lucky. For, unlike 15,000 other Argentinians who were seized by the military over the past five years, he Timerman lived. And he has used that grace to write an extraordinary book about his experience. It is the most gripping and the most important book I have read in a lnog time: pripping in its human stories, not only of brutality but of courage and love; important because it reminds us how, m nur world, the most terrible fantasies may become fact.

A Controlled Passion

Nnt just autobiography, or political analysis, or a victim's cry in the night, it is all these things. Timerman describes what he suffered in prison and what he thought, and how he and Arthur the thought, and how he and Arthur the thought and here they were the gentina got to where they were. He writes with passion, but a passion controlled almost to the point of desachment. The effect is devastating.

In spare words, Timerman shows us a sophisticated society falling into irrationality and savagery — a savagery in which nearly everyone silently acquiesces. He gives an unforgettable picture of our century's special contribution to civilization: state terrorism. It happened in Argentina. But those who read this book around the world will understand the universal application. It could happen, it has hap-pened, elsewhere. The methods of modern tyranny repeat themselves.

With this reality compare the political-science abstraction that has served since last Jan. 20 as a premise of U.S. human-rights policy: the theory that rightist governments are merely "authoritarian" and do less damage to human rights than "totalitarian"

The principal author of that theory is Jeane Kirkpatrick, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Elaborating it in 1979 in the magazine Commentary, she wrote that, unlike Communist "traditional autocrats" observe "tradi-tional taboos." For example, they re-spect "hahitual parterns of family and personal relations."

I thought about Ambassador Kirkpatrick when I read Timerman's de-scription of the Miralles family: fa-ther, two sons and a daughter-in-law. Timerman heard them tortured, and they were not the only ones.

"Of all the dramatic situations I witnessed in clandestine prisons," he writes, "nothing can compare to those family groups who were tortured of-ten together, sometimes separately but in view of one another. . . . The entire affective world, constructed over the years with utmost difficulty, collapses with a kick in the father's genitals . . . or the sexual violation of a daughter. Suddenly an entire culture based on familial love, devotion, the capacity for mutual sacrifice collapses."

The Argentine amhassadar to Washington, Jurge A. Aja Espil, writing to The New York Times recently in defense of his government, cited the case of Jacobo Timerman as an example of its "independent judici-The Argentine courts, he said, "are open to him as they are to any

What happened to Timerman was

At 2 in the morning on April 15, 1977, 20 armed men in civilian cluthes raided his apartment in Buenos Aires. They handcuffed him, covered his head with a hlanket, threw him on the floor of his car and drove off with him. They said they were acting on orders of the First Army Corps, When his wife telephoned that corps, when was told that no one there knew any-thing about it. He had disappeared. In June he disappeared from there - apparently, as he oicced it together later, because the U.S. assistant secretary of state for human rights, Patricia Derian, was coming to Argentina and would almost certainly ask to see Timerman, some in the military thought others might release him as a goodwill gesture and wanted to pre-

The electric shocks begin No. In June, 1978, the Argeotine Supreme Court ruled that, because there we're no charges against him, he must be released. He was not.

In September, 1979, the Supreme Court for the second time ordered his release. The generals in the govern-ment were divided on what to do. Under heavy pressure from the Carter administration and members of the Congress, the generals reached a Solomonic decision. Without any authority in law, they annulled Timerman's citizenship, confiscated his newspaper and all other property, and expelled him from the country, without a chance to appeal to the courts, by taking him under guard to a plane for the courts.

Why was Timerman kidnapped tortured, detained? There is no for the mal, legal answer to that question, be cause no charges were ever made against him. And there is no clear example 0 planation of any other kind.

His newspaper had printed stories the military disliked, but it had no carried on a sustained challenge to the junta; and Timerman had maintained personal relationships with some mili tary figures.

The lack of a rational explanation is in fact an important aspect of wha in fact an important aspect of wha happened — to Timerman and thou sands of others. For Argentina habeen in the grip of unreason.

The Argentine armed forces, Timerman says, have long fived in a hermetic world, the officers linked by family with each other and with certain civil ians who cooperate in intermitten military rule. They want life to be clear-cut, orderly, they resent to the point of hatred, of obsessive fantasy the disorderly contemporary developments in science, religion, literature.

The military sovernment indicated

The military government indicated some of its fears of the modern world by its decrees. Times were a some of the source of the modern world by its decrees. by its decrees, Timerman says. It imposed strict moral as well as political censorship. "Argentina has three maintenances," one ideologue of the military regime said. "Karl Marx, because he tried to destroy the Christian concept of society. Signand Freud, because he tried to destroy the Christian concept of the family; and Albert Einstein because he tried to destroy the Christian concept of time and space." ### Baseball Owners Put a High Price on Truth

NEW YORK - The point to remember about baseball's kangaroo court that fined Harry Dalton $50,000 for telling the truth is that the court penalizes dissenters only.
A majority of baseball's offiMiller, head of the players' union, A majority of baseball's officials, including the commissioner himself, have had their say about labor relations in the business, but they dnn't get fined as long as they

Dalton's crime was not speaking out in violation of the gag rule known as the "Grebey discipline code," He sinned by suggesting that management was unwilling to compromise on the issue of compensation for players lost to free agency. That is, he was quoted as suggesting it; baseball refuses to identify the five members of the kangaroo court and Dalton has

"The owners refuse to discuss have made They simply come back with their 16-month-old plan, unchanged by as much as a comma."

That plan sets up peculiar criteria defining a player of quality and provides that a team signing such a player as a free agent must send his former employer a player out of its own organization. The play-ers rejected that when it was proposed, but the owners announced during the winter that they would implement the plan starting next

Nobody has suggested that Dal-ton didn't know what be was talking about when and if he made the ments that were published. He and Frank Cashen of the New York Mets represented the clubs along with Ray Grebey, their chief labor negotiator, on the committee that met with Sal Bando of Milwaukee, Bob Boone of the Phillies and Miller in a fruitless effort to find a solution to the compensatinn controversy. When that mis-sinn failed and the owners announced implementation of their old plan, the players voted to strike May 29, About the "Grebey discipline code," Miller said:

When you consider that this is a self-imposed gag rule, it is an unbelievable advertisement of weak-ness. They're afraid of what their own people might say. Can you imagine what the media would do to us if we start to impose such a rule on our membership?

Ray Grebey declined to comment on the action against Dalton, explaining that he was not a member of the disciplinary committee and bad had nothing to do with the fine. He didn't confirm or deny newspaper reports that the gag rule was recommended by him.

"Murray Chass for The New York Times] credited me with it. Murray thinks I'm the reincarnation of Pope Leo XIII, empowered to issue encyclicals."

> Asked for his opinion regarding the likelihood of a strike, Marvin Miller said he simply didn't know. He sounded sad and ineffably wea-

> From here, a strike seems more and more probable. With the deadline approse ching, negotiations are at a standstill. The owners have taken out strike insurance worth many millions; they are ruthless in their treatment of anyone who speaks up, as Dalton probably did; they flatly refuse to alter their stand on the compensation issue.

In the propaganda they send to the press, they repeat and reiterate the statement that if their plan had been in effect last November, only three free agents would have qualified as calling for compensation. It is inconceivable that men with millions of their own invested in baseball would invite a costly strike -possibly a ruinous one — over a system affecting three of 650 play-

The only reasonable conclusion is that they are determined to test the players and their uning. Some owners, at least, cannot believe that players would sacrifice million-dollar salaries to fight for a principle.

If you saw nothing but dollar signs when you looked at baseball, you wouldn't believe it, either.

After 22 Years, Whitworth Still Is the Queen of Golf

By Dave Anderson

New York Tunes Service
NEW YORK. — With a modest majesty, Kathy Whitworth has been out there on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour 22 years — almost as long as most of the other women pros have been

She was 19 when she turned pro in 1959, a tall Texan who had grown up in Jal, N.M., and she remembers when the galleries were small that the spectators strolled along the fairways with the golfers. When the crowds got larger, she remembers bow the golfers themselves hammered the stakes into the ground and strung the ropes. She also remembers when there weren't quite so many good golfers on the LPGA tour.

"Now you have to play as hard as you can — every shot, every hole, every week," she says. "I sit back in awe at some of the girls playing now.

Whitworth has it backwards. As gifted as they are, the young women playing now are in awe of ber. At 41, she not only is the LPGA's career leading money-winner, but she is the ninth leading moneywinner this year.

Nearing $1 Million

The Unkindest Cut

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — In this night-mare I go to the doctor for treatment of a hangnail, but my regular doctor is gooe. He has been replaced by a brilliant young Republican doctor.

"How long have you been hav-ing these hangnails?" he asks. For years and years and years, doc. He

What does he propose? Taking off my fingers below the second knuckle. I protest. Why cut so radically? To prevent future medical expenditures for treatment of skinned knuckles. I demand a secood opinion, and -lo! - in walks another doctor.

This one is suave and has a winning smile and oils me with sympa-He is a Democrat "Stop!" cries he. "Stop, you brilliant but heartless young Republican! What you are proposing would do irreparable damage to this patient and would be a disgrace to the American Hangnail Therapeutics Associ-

They fence spiritedly with scalpels and issue bravado for TV transmissioo into 30 million houses where people cheer in silent stupor. At last, the Democratic doctor announces a compromise acceptable to the Republican doctor. It is a typical Democratic compromise.

"But I don't want to have both feet removed," I scream. The Democratic doctor pays oo attention. He is occupied telling a television camera that Democrats are better money savers than Republicans. The way to make real long-term savings is to eliminate the last possibility of athlete's foot," he is say-ried away bodily and placed under a spacious elm to stare at a hanging. The crowd cheers enthusiastic-ally when a brilliant young Republican hangman announces that he has reduced the rope length by 80 percent to create savings that will restore the economy.

l object that they have the wrong man, but oobody listens unnil a Democratic hangman steps forward, silences the crowd and places a friendly arm around my shoulder. Putting a rope around an innocent man's neck, he declares, is a dreadful thing to do. Everyone present will regret it one of these

He calls upon every man in the crowd to surrender shoelaces and. after tying them together, hands his shoelace rope to the brilliant young Republican hangmao. "When you want in cut the rope budget," he thunders, "get a Dem-ocrat to show you how it's dooe,"

Hoisted cruelly into the air, I find myself in a harber's chair. Don't take too much off the sides," I am saying, as I always say to the barber.

The barber chuckles with a brilliant young Republican chuckle. "You have damaged the American ecocomy ooce too often with your wastefully inflationary insistence on inadequate harbering." he cac-kles. "I'm going to cut down to the scalp to reduce the barbering hudget. With the mooey you save by oot having to pay for a haircut for the oext six months, you can invest in American industry and help solve the inflation problem."

"You can't solve inflation hy throwing hair at it." I whine. For-tunately the huge shears are seized at the penultimate moment by a smiling, friendly, oleaginous Dem-ocratic harber. "Republicao barbers don't know how to give a humane haircut," he says.

I want to lick his hand with gratitude as he puts down the shears, but he is busy selecting a razor. We will save real money the Democratic way," he says.

Everything is suddenly pitch hlack. I seem to be in a vast, lightless, empty tunnel struggling toward wakefulness, but I am not l am inside a Democratic hrain.

'If You'll Excuse Me for Giving Myself a Little Bouquet, I Think I Used Age Pretty Well'

By John Vinocur

A couple of decades ago, Miss

Signoret represented the kind of mature seductiveness that many young men, but particularly Americans not quite at ease with the Gina Lollohrigidas and Jayne

Mansfields, wished for themselves. As Alice, the French mistress, she was oot really beautiful, but better - at the edge of beauty — and she seemed what was called, a bit suphemistically,

For a while back there, she could have lunged at a kind of stardom that probably would have made it difficult or impossihie for her to portray, much later, either a cleaning lady or a ruined old whore, or, as in "I Sent a Letter to My Love" ("Chere Incon-oue"), which just opened in New York, an old-maid sister — frus-

She is 60 oow and is getting over a very rough year in which she had her gallbladder removed and was severely ill with an ail-

UTHEUIL, France - Over A the last few years, Simone

> She is sitting out in back of her house in Normandy, about an hour from Paris, working on the translation of a book from English to French. The book is about a woman's life in Czechoslovakia, Sweden and the United States; it is both passionate and poliocal, which sums up Miss Signoret as well, and she says the job has transfixed her as much as playing any role. "I Sent a Letter to My Love" is about a sister and brother who live alone in Brittany. He is confined to a wheelchair and she, a spinster, has spent her adult life taking care of him.

The tensions between Louise Martio (Signoret) and her brother, played hy Jean Rochefort, are often extraordinary. In a fort, are often extraordinary. In a remarkable scene, the brother drags up his sister's fling with a black American soldier just after D-day, 35 years before, Miss Signore's face is breathaking. The hurt and the pride are real.

The sister gets the brother involved, through a oewspaper ad, in an exchange of letters with a womao. Uokoown to her brother, she is the woman. The correspondence fills him mainly with lust, and her with love.

Anyone asking Miss Signoret how she builds a role should oot expect an answer that will go into the drama school anthologies. "I doo't construct anything," she says. "It's perfectly impossible for me to analyze what I do be-cause I doo't construct. It comes or it doesn't come. Becoming Louise or someone is absolutely without any kind of intellectual intervention. I became her, the way I become all the other women I've played. I don't say it's the right method, but it's the one I've

"I get very stupid when some-body asks me how I prepare a role. Perhaps I'm not intelligent in every area, but I become particularly unintelligeot when I've got to explain how I became a persoo who I'm not any longer, who's died in me some time ago.

But if I were asked the same question when I'm filming, I'd be incapable of answering hecause I think the less you analyze a role, this mysterious adventure, well, the better. The person you're playing is a kind of tenant who ives chez vous. There's an expression, putting yourself into somebody's skin — that's absolutely false. It isn't a character that you're going into, it's the character that enters your skin, installs itself in yours, lives in yours. And while it's happening you can'te it would be him or her that would do the talking."

> What she is proud of, although she never explains what her physical appearance meant in her relations with people and the way she thinks they saw her, is that she oever thought to hide her age or changed appearance. She doesn't mention how all of this fit in with the image of her husband for 31 years, Yves Montand, who continues as a seductive type, grayed hut still wildly handsome, and who still sings romantically. But she is proud of him and proud of herself.

> "If you'll excuse me for giving myself a little bouquet. I think I used age pretty well," she said. "I didn't cling to an appearance that would have been artificial. I got old the way women who aren't actresses grow old, the way the woman in the butcher shop does or a university professor or a prostitute. I got old. But I continued to work, as opposed to certain women who tried to hold onto their grand image, their dream image, and who didn't want to get out of that and couldn't work anymore. . . .

"When you're an actress, there when you're an achiess, here are two solutions: either you do like Garbo and you say, 'Schias, fertig, basta, it's over! Please leave me alone!' Or you don't. I think the Garbo choice is sad. OK, maybe she's doing some wild things, and she has all kinds of crazy little friends. Perhaps. It's possible. But I don't think it's Working actress Signoret.

"Or you change and you get to work. The happy solution for someone who's an actress is to have been a very charming young lady and finish acting as a greatgrandmother, all without interruption. Of course, that's the op-posite notion to being a star."

All this comes out at hunch, on the terrace behind the big white house. Miss Signoret serves what she calls a Normandy-Chinese stew and drinks what she says is Ayatollah Khomeini beer, which has no alcohol. When something comes up that she thinks she's explained best in a book she wrote a few years ago, "Nostalgia Isn't What It Used to Be," she'll grab the book and read a pas-

Time leaves sears, she says, and in her case those scars have been allies and indeed, she admits, an alibi. The alibi part gets oo further treatment. A little amhiguity never hurt anybody.

Where there have been no alibis or ambiguity all these years is politics. Miss Signorer and her husband have constantly spoken out on things they consider important. In a country that loves petitions, their names have regularly been found with the rest at the bottom. Their positions have been very eclectic, but the line is generally to the left. Now there is less of that, and no willingness to talk about how people should vote or run their

"We never completely belonged to an ideology," she said, which is true because then we would have belonged to a party — which we never did in our life Not an hour, that is, even if we aligned ourselves on certain points, in certain very precise areas. Of course it would be surprising if we didn't have two or three political ideas in our heads at our age. But the important things are the specific things you can put your finger on and say there's this and this and that and be able to prove it. Then you act so that you go to bed saying, I wasn't disgusting today. That's another kind of selfishness having peace with your con-

Bad Associations

She talked about the years she entered the United States on a waiver, rather than a respectable full visa, and how a woman she knew who had been the mistress of a Gestapo agent held a perma-nent entry visa. The whole procedure always had very bad associations: mainly, waiting in a train in 1944 while the Nazi police checked their book for the name Kaminker, her maiden name, the one on her identity card, that of her Jewish father.

She looked around, really going now. So, I think its enough. I know America. I've got a lot of friends there and it's a beautiful place. But I don't want to go into that immigration cage with the man who says, 'Oh, you're special,' because that's what I get when I get there. 'Hey, Simone, you're special. With a nice, good smile. You're special. But I'm so special that I don't oeed to be told I'm special once more. It's a question of pride. I

She smiles and changes subjects. She says she expects to be filming again in about three months. "Which," she adds, quite triumphantly, "is all I ever really had in mind
